

Being a part of The Safety Box completely transformed my life. 12 years ago I was 17 year olds, with little to no qualifications, growing up in a tough part of south London in the midst of a major gang and violence crime problems. I had very little options other than a pipe line dream to start my own sports related business. After seeing Nathaniel on the 'The Last Millionaire' TV programme on BBC 3 I contacted The Safety Box to ask for advice.

To my surprise I was offered an opportunity that later turned out to be the most important turning point in my entire life. Under The Safety Box programs guidance and mentorship from Nathaniel. I developed a sports learning programme designed to reengage underachievers back into education.

The system was a resounding success with notable success stories. The experience improved my commercial understanding and transformed my leadership capabilities. Over the next few years I was able to leverage this experience to get on to an Access course, earn a scholarship at the University of Nottingham and was accepted on to one of the toughest business masters courses in the country at the University of Bath. I then went on to completing an Internship at The Bank of New York Mellon and recently was made one of the youngest Partners ever at a leading financial services institution.

The Safety Box changes lives, I am a living example.
